Climate Change and Food: Challenges for the Future

Agricultural and food issues increasingly face an existential ethical challenge to ensure that the 7 billion—and rising—people of planet Earth have access to nourishing food while at the same time reducing agriculture's adverse impact on the climate and the environment. We view and concern agricultural and food ethic issues, and all of these ethical issues and concerns would promise to offer needed counsel for cleaner and more climate friendly approaches farming and food production.

We invite submissions of abstracts relating to the following aspects of agricultural and food ethics:

1. Crops production in climate change and ethics
2. Animal production in climate change and ethics
3. Planning and land ethics
4. Consumer and food safety
5. Food and agricultural education
6. Food sovereignty and justice
7. Gender and food
8. Indigenous peoples' food sovereignty
9. Ethics and genetically modified food
10. Ethnic groups and food cultures
11. Other
